Here is a nut for any publicist about to treat on the theme, 'Principles, not Men." In New York at the last election Dix and Kernan polled between them CAUTION LEA & PERRIN'S 836,787 votes; at the same time a question involving, or supposed to involve, a direct tax of $6,600,000 was submitted, and but 110,323 votes in all were cast hereon. In Virginia, at the same general election, 190,716 votes were east for Congressmen, and but 60,492 on an article amendatory of the State constitution in so important a point as the rate of interest on money. In Wisconsin the aggregate Presidential vote was 191,297, and but 46,027 the presidency; but on the question of township organization only 3069, and on the question of demestic animals running at large only 3467. Everywhere, if the issue be Republican Roe against Democratic Doe a full vote comes out, but when this principle or that is in question men fail to vote. Why?
